SATURDAY, April 17-6 P. M. The weekly statement of the associated banks is ghly favorable. The loans have decreased over a nillion and a quarter of dollars, while the legal ten-ers have increased nearly two million four hundred lousand. The decrease in circulation is one hun-red and seventy thousand. The loss of specie is carly a million—the unfavorable feature of the statenent; but as the customs duties of the week have been a the vicinity of two millions it is evident that specio a going into the banks. The payment of the May s has given the banks more gold, reflected the increase of deposits. The excess above the

It will be seen by the above statement that the banks are still losers of specie. The mercantile in-terest is greatly the sufferer by the scarcity of 'oash" gold—as the actual coin is technically known n Wall street—and business men are forced day after day to pay high rates for its use in carrying on their transactions. Gold is a commodity which is absolutely necessary in certain transactions. It is the only currency for the importing es, and is just now too limited in its it to go around among those who it. The holders once in a while take a notion to "squeeze" the market, and up goes the price, or up goes the borrowing rate. The United lates Treasury has over a hundred millions idle old in its vaults. Its retention is a clear loss of even millions per annum to the country. Why can-not the Secretary of the Treasury authorize Mr. Van such as government bonds. If he is apprehensive that the pledges are fluctuating in price they will be the Gold Room and in the excitement which attended the drss inquiries as high as 1-8 was paid for borrow-ing to Monday. The supply increased later in the forenoon and by half-past eleven o'clock loans were made at 1, 2 and 2½ per cent per annum for carrying. In the afternoon loans were made at flat and 1-32 for borrowing to Monday, and at 2 per cent per annum for carrying. The following is the report of the Gold Exchange Banks—

$1,040,000 in specie. The arrival was too late to appear in the bank statement.

Foreign exchange was firm, and rates ranged as follows:—Sterling, sixty days, commercial, 107 a 107%; good to prime bankers', 107% a 108; short sight, 108% a 108%. Paris, sixty days, 5.20% a 5.21%; short sight, 5.21% a 5.18%; Antwerp, 5.20% a 5.22%; Switzerland, 5.20% a 5.22%; Hamburg, 35 a 35%; Amsterdam, 39% a 40; Frankfort, 40 a 40%; Bremen, 77% a 78; Prussian thaiers, 70% a 70%.

The government market opened with a continuation of the buoyancy which has prevailed during the week, and the 62's sold quite freely at 121, a lot of $100,000 bringing that price. This figure brought out sellers at the noon board, when buyers were less urgent in their bids, and the market became steady if not dull for the old issues. The domestic bonds were still buoyant and rose a quarter to three-eighths per cent above the very high prices of yesterday. The following were the closing street prices this afternoon:—United States sixes, 1881, registered, 117 a 117%; do., coupon, 117% a 117%; do., five-twenties, 1882, 190%, a 121. alternoon:—United States sixes, 1881, registered, 117 a 117½; do., coupon, 117½ a 117½; do., five-twenties, 1882, 120½ a 121; do., 1884, 116½ a 116½; do., 1885, 118 a 118½; do., new, 1885, 118½ a 116½; do., 1887, 115½ a 115½; do., 1888, 115½ a 115½; ten-forties, registered, 105½ a 105½; do., coupon, 106½ a 106½; currency bonds, 104½ a 104½.

In the money market there was a still easier feeling, and the rate on call loans was even seven per cent currency, with a good demand arising out of ent currency, with a good demand arising out of the greater activity of the stock market. No exceponal rates above or below the legal figure are re-orted. It is a matter of some surprise that the comptroller of the Currency has not as yet called for a t under the provisions of the new law. The omist thinks this delay "has a tendency to re-operations by the banks and exerts a baneful the Comptroller's discretion in this matter is the subject of severe comment in banking and financial circles, as he has certainly needlessly contributed to In fact, the whole system of bank statements has become a farce and a nulsance, and the sooner it is ceduced to a simple annual statement, as before the inauguration of the national system, the better for the banks and for the public. It is safe, apparently, to anticipate, for some weeks to come, a steady ease in money, though low rates would appear to be quite improbable." Commercial paper was more active for the names which are fewest in the market. Acceptances of this class sold to-day at nine per cent, which is a concession on the part of buyers likely to afford the business community an opportunity of undertaking engagements which they were unwilling to assume walle the discount-ing rate ruled so high. The best business men are fixed in the principle that no enterprise can ever be safe or wise which pays for accommodation at such travagant figures.

The ollowing were the bids for the city bank stocks at "e regular board:—New York, 132; Merchants', 127; M. chanics', 131; Union, 130; America, 145; City, 200; Na. and, 110; Seventh Ward, 110; Commerce, 1224; Mechants', Hanover, 110; Metro-Commerce, 122%; Mechanics' Banking Association 122: Ocean, 105; Chatham, 107; Hanover, 110; Metro politan, 141%; Shoa and Leat, er, 133; Corn Exchange, 130; Importers and Traders, 132; Central National, 108%; Fourth National, 108%; National, 1083/; Fourth National, 103; Ninth Na-tional, 111; Tenth National, 98; Oriental, 150.

Executive sessions of the regular and open boards were held to-day at noon. The regular board by a large vote expressed their favorable views of the proposal to unite both boards in a single organizaproposal to unite both boards in a single organiza-tion. The committee of the open board reported progress and asked for further time, when a resolu-tion was adopted empowering them to take the regulative preliminary steps for a union of the two boards, and report at the next meeting. The st ock market was again active and strongly buoyant, "effecting the greater abundance of money for specul, three uses and the favorable character of the bank at atement. The particular feature was New York Ce atral, which sold up to 166%, which, Sew York (a recent payment of the four per cent considering the recent payment of the four per cent semi-annual dividend, is the highest price it has yet

An Albany correspondent writes:—

There are unquestionably great exertions being made to carry the eighty per cent and consolidation railroad bills through the Senate. Almost any hour of the day there may be seen on the floor of the Senate chamber the most prominent member of the special railroad committee, and outside it is noticeable that the lobby opponents of the reign of Vanderbuit are remarkably quiet. The opposition has faded away in its open stage, and if at all exciting is running quiet and deeply. Yet with all this, the unpopularity of the measure in the country districts may hold a controlling power, and the bill die in its final struggle. The Governor's veto power, so often interposed, has put a damper upon the friends of corrupt legislation, and they do not work with the will they used to, when all that was necessary was to pass the Legislature, the Executive being always submissive.

REAL ESTATE MATTERS.

The real estate market continues utterly without excitement and almost without interest. Adulness amounting to stagnation, has settled upon it, presenting no prospect of a revival of activity for some time to come. The severe monetary stringency has passed without bringing any relief, and those who passed without bringing any relief, and those who trusted to the removal of that depressing condition to impart new animation to operations find the market yet "flat, stale and unprofitable." The only transaction in the auction mart yesterday was the saic, by order of George W. McLean, Street Commissioner, of all the buildings and parts of buildings from the southerly side of Fulton street to the northerly side of Morris street, required for the extension of Church street, subject to the condition that all the

The five mills in operation in seven months preceding the lat of January last crushed ore yielding an average of $40s to the ton, and amounting in the aggregate to $1,000,000. Since January 1, 1869, the monthly yield has been about $200,000. At the date of Mr Dahlgren's letter there were four mills running in the district, with thirty-three stamps; one, with five stamps, being out of repair; four, with fifty-five stamps, were going up rapidly, and a twenty stam mill outside of the district was to commence work on White Pine ores. The ore now in sight is estimated as sufficient to keep all the mills running to a year.

mated as sufficient to keep an the ministration a year.

The population of the district on the 14th of March last was about 7,000, and people were arriving at the rate of fifty per day. The wages of miners was about five dollars a day, and work was plenty. Altogether this new El borado appears to have contributed a larger amount of silver than any other mining district ever did within a similar period after its first discovery.

CHINA.

Advantages Arising from Steamboat Navi-gation—The Road from Tung Chow to Pekin—Primitive Modes of Conveyance— The City of Pekin—The Emperor—Chinese Customs-Religious Teleration.

PEKIN, Feb. 2, 1888.

The introduction of steamboats into Chinese waters is working great change in the course of travel. In former days the capital was reached by the grand canal which formed the principal route of communication between the southern provinces and Pekin, and was intersected by all the water courses leading from the mountains of Tartary to the sea.

Steamships have now changed the course of travel and trade from the interior to the sea, and lines of steamers run from all the coast ports to Tein Tsin, the scaport of Pekin.

Tien Tsin is a city containing half a million of inhabitants, and from its location at the head of steam navigation, on the Peiho river, and at the intersection of the grand canal, must be a place of great commercial importance. It is the principal port of the province of Chihle, "the Supreme province," containing a population of 28,000,000 of people, and sumpiles, besides three or four northern provinces, and the great regions of Manchurin and Mongolia. It is also the entrepot of the trade overland to Siberia and Russia, and one of the most interesting features of Tien Tsin commerce is the long caravans of camels loading with tea and slik for the overland journey of near 5,000 miles through Mongolia and Siberia to Russia.

primitive mode of travelling which has been in use among the natives ever since the flood. The varieties of conveyances from Tien Tein to Pekin are boats, carts, palanquin, horses, mules, donkeys and wheel-barrows. There is a great variety and very little choice. The boat is the least uncomfortable, and, besides, will carry your luggage, so we engaged a fleet of boats at about three times the price the natives would have to pay and commenced the ascent of the Petho river. For the first five or six miles we threaded our way slowly through the thousands of junks which choke the river, but having passed the mouth of the grand canal the navigation improved and we were enabled to make twenty-five or thirty miles a day. Each boat will carry two passengers, and is manned by three or four men who by alternately polling, tracking and sailing will carry you to Tung Chow, the head of towboat navigation, in four or five days. In these boats you have to carry your own provisions and bedding. A small apartment in the stern serves as a cook house, where your China boy performs the mysteries of the custome, and with the abundance of poultry, eggs, vegetables, pears, peaches, apples and grapes along the banks of the Petho you can live sumptuously. At night the boats are anchored to the banks of the river and you can listen all night to the melodies of gongs, rattics, bamboo futes, and the different scales of Chinese music. The boatmen, with their long tails and flowing robes, remind one forcibly of the devis in "Dante's Interno" as they jump ashore to anchor the boat for the night. the first five or six miles we threaded our way slowly ierno" as they jump ashore to anchor the boat for the night.

Along the left hand they had wheeled about;
But first had each thrust his tongue between his teeth Towards their leader for a signal;
And each had made a trumpet of his rump.

The road from Tung Chow to Pekin was formerly paved with large flat stones, but as no repairs have been made on it for some two hundred years it resembles a dilapidated graveyard, and forms a boule-ward about equal in smoothness to the Giant's Causeway.

A passenger in one of their travelling carts sits cross-legged like a tailor, and holds on to the side pieces with each hand; if he leans back he will break his spine, and if he does not keep a sharp look-out a sideways jolt will break his skull. They are heavy, cumbersome vehicles, made of stout wood, large wooden wheels with iron bands fastened with long iron spikes. The top is covered with blue cotton cloth, and when the curtain is fastened down in front, to keep the dust from smothering the passenger, it is indeed a gloomy and uncomfortable mode of riding into the capital of the great Chinese Empire. Riding in these carts does not produce that equanimity of mind and serently of countenance appropriate to entering the capital of a great and friendly Power, so we got out and walked.

The vicinity of Pekin does not indicate the approach to a capital of four hundred millions of people; the miserable roads, the mud hovels, and the squalid inhabitants clad in rags and the remnants of sheepskins do not impress one favorably with Chinese civilization. It is better to read books written two sheepskins do not impress one favorably with Chinese civilization. It is better to read books written two or three hundred years ago. The walls are fifty to sixty feet high, with pagoda towers over the gates of four or five stories each, reaching nearly the same height, covered with the peculiar enamelied tiles of China, reflecting the bright rays of an Asiatic sun as freshly as if they were only made yesterday.

Pekin is a quaint old city. The walls, as before remarked, are sixty feet high—they are forty to fifty feet wide at the top, and afford a promeande around the city of some twenty-five miles in extent. There are only four gates—north, east, south and west, and these are opened and closed with the sun. The walls are not defended by artillery, and appear to be entirely useless at the present time. If a stranger were taken around the walls of Pekin and shown the magnificent plan of its founder, its palaces covered with green, red, yellow and blue enamelied tiles; its temples, enabowered in groves of trees; its pagodas, its churches, its mosques, its fine public buildings, exposed above the forest of trees which overshadow the mud hovels which line its dirty streets, he would declare it an earthly paradise; but when he is taken to a lower depth, amidst the filth and wretchedness of a mitlion people crowded within its walls, he would declare with emphasis that it was—one other place.

In the midst of a fertile country, teeming with an industrious population; in the immediate vicinity of coal, iron and the preclous metals; within sixty miles of the sea, the capital of an empire of 40,000,000 of people is crumbling to ruin. Why There can be only one answer:—The government. The founders of the Tartar dynasty must have been men of great and enlarged minds. The plan of Pekin is a conception worthy of the greatest engineer, and is not surpassed in grandeur by any city, ancient or modern—neither by Rome of the man and the dust of ages is shrouding its monuments in obscurry in the tree is a should be an endine the c omee, and may be considered the training pre-empire.

The Emperor is going through the training pre-scribed by the rigid isws of the Mancha dynasty for a successor to the throne. His mother is styled "Em-press Regent," but does not transact any business in public, as it would be contrary to Chinese usages for a woman to conduct public business. It is the custom

The term was of the Emperor in any public chive of the second of sanding the archive of the first of his limitrons father, Hien-runs, the contest capital of Manchuris. I magnificate parillon was specied at the last gate of the pales, lined with yealow satin and covered with matting on which the dragon and other importal devices were painted. The Emperor went as far as this paylion with the imperial cortion. of the palace, theed with yellow satin and covered with menting on which the dragon and other imperial devices were painted. The Emperor went as far as this pavilion with the imperial cortege, and remained bowed down before the portrait of his father while the procession passed by under a select escort of Hanchu bannermen, the hereditary guards of the throne. On the day of this ceremony the foreign ministers resident in Pakin received an invitation from the authorities requesting the foreign aministers resident in Pakin received his confine themselves to their respective legations. The authorities have recently been very much exercised about a chasm in the city like that which opened in the Boman Forum, threatening to swalter the city.

invitation from the authorities requesting the foreigness in the city not to be present, but to confine thamselves to their respective legations. The authorities have recently been very much exercised about a chasm in the city like that which opened in the Roman Forum, threatening to swaliow up the city. In excavating for a new foundation for the pier of one of the bridges across the stream which runs through the city the workmen came to quickmand, which soon filled with salt water, so that all efforts to stop its flow proved fruitless—it was feared, from its being salt water, that the sea was about to burst into Pekin and inupdate the city. Prince Kung was sent for and made the custs incantations, but the chasm still yawns, and I now understand from a high officer of the Uninese government that the authorities have decided to take twelve babies from the founding hospital to fill the chasm and propitate the angry demon.

Mr. Robert Hart, superintendent of the Imperial Maritime Castoms establishment is erecting at the Custom House establishment at Pekin the first gasworks which have been introduced into the interior of China, and it may be hoped that this improvement may lead to the illumination of China in more ways than one.

The foreign legations in Pekin are the British, French, Russian, American, Prussian and Spanish, which, with a few missionaries and the employes of the imperial customs, form the foreign society of the capital, numbering in all 100 or 150 persons. Among them are about a dozen iadies, who give an especial charm to social life in this remote capital.

The Rohnen Catholics have long been established here, and have two churches within the city walls which would be creditable pieces of architecture in Paris.

At the Russian legation service is conducted every subsath in the forms of the Greek Church, and the Episcopal service is performed regularly at the British legation.

The Protestant missionaries have no public house of worship, but meet on the Sabbath and during the week at the house of elied tiles and surmounted by a large gilt ball. The blue tiled roof shining out above the green foliage of the trees in the enclosure gives it a beautiful appearance.

The Temple of Earth, or Agriculture, in a similar enclosure, is about a mile distant, on the opposite side of the city. In this temple the deity of the earth, or agriculture, was formerly worshipped, but its present condition would indicate that the celebration of rites to the noblest pursuit of man has been neglected for about 160 years. The most interesting object remaining is an artificial pool of water dedicated to the spirit governing rain, and here, in periods of great drought, supplications are made by the Emperor or some one delegated for that duty. The pool is supposed to be inhabited by the Black Dragon, the spirit of the waters, and in a recent period of drought, supplications having been made in vain, the authorities concluded to try the virtue of intimidation, and an imperial decree was issued ordering one of the sages and statesmen of China to proceed to the pool in state and throw a tiger's head in the dragon's pool, which so frightened the dragon that it rained in a very short time.

The Lamisary, or worship of the yellow cap Lamas is the most novel of any in Pekin. These establishments are under the head of the Grand Lama of Thibet, and for reasons of State policy are liberally endowed by the Chinese government. The priests are Mongolians and their residence in Pekin is considered a guarantee for the fidelity of the Mongolian subjects of the Emporor. The priests have shaved heads, wear a yellow cap, with a ridge of camel's hair on top like a fireman's heimet, and dress in yellow robes.

In the tempte they have a gilt statue of Buddha acventy-five feet high, the altar had candles burning like the Roman Catholic service, and the chani of 400 or 500 men and coys embraces a scale of music which far exceeds in molody anything that can be heard elsewhere in China.
